Average Wage

The average, or mean, data reflect a weighted mean. To derive the weighted mean, the hourly wage rate of each employee in a specific occupation is totaled and then divided by the number of employees. Unusually high or low wages can inflate or deflate the average wage.

Employment

This is the estimate of total number of workers employed in a specific occupation. This is not the number of employees from companies responding to the wage survey.

Entry Wage

This term refers to the average wage paid to those in the bottom third of workers in an occupation. This is an imputed wage measure rather than a surveyed measure.

Metropolitan Statistical Area

A metropolitan statistical area is a county or collection of adjacent counties with a minimum population of 50,000 within a city or urbanized area. Metropolitan statistical areas are officially designated by the U.S. Office of Management and Budget. Currently, there are five in Idaho: Boise City-Nampa MSA, Coeur d'Alene MSA, Idaho Falls MSA, Lewiston MSA and Pocatello MSA.

Middle Range (25th & 75th Percentiles)

All wages reported in an occupation for each worker are arrayed from lowest to highest: the middle 50 percent of the workers is the middle below the low end of the middle range and one-fourth of the employees are earning wages above the high end. This range provides the user with information regarding the variance of pay within an occupation.

Midpoint or Median Wage

All wages reported in an occupation for each worker are arrayed from lowest to highest: the wage of the absolute middle in the occupation is the median wage or midpoint, otherwise known as the 50th percentile. One-half of the workers in the occupation earned wages below the midpoint and the other half earned wages above the midpoint.

Occupation

An occupation is a set of activities or tasks that employees are paid to perform. Employees who perform essentially the same tasks are included in the same occupation whether they are in the same industry. Some occupations are concentrated in a particular industry. Others may be found across a wide variety of industries.

SOC Code

The numerical code identifies an occupation and its relation to other occupations in the survey. Read more about the way occupations are grouped together in the next part of this introduction.

Wage

Included as wages, or pay, for this survey are base rate, commissions, tips, deadheading pay, guaranteed pay, hazard pay, incentive pay, longevity pay, on-call pay, piece rate, portal-to-portal pay, production bonus and cost-of-living allowance.

Excluded from wages, or pay, for use in this survey are attendance bonus, back pay, draw, holiday premium pay, jury duty pay, lodging payment, meal payment, merchandise discount, nonproduction bonus, holiday bonus, overtime pay, perquisites, profit sharing payment, relocation allowance, tuition repayment, severance pay, shift differential, stock bonus, tool allowance, vacation pay, weekend pay and uniform allowance.

More About the Survey

Selecting the Sample

An industry employment-size stratification method was used to select the sample of firms. With this method, large firms represent themselves in the wage estimates while smaller firms represent both themselves and a number of other similar-size companies in the same industry. In cases where the employer had multiple units, the employment at each worksite was used in the stratification.

Data Collection Methodology

The survey form used to collect employment and wage data is a structured, uniform collection document provided by the U.S. Department of Labor, Bureau of Labor Statistics. The same form is used in all states and territories to collect similar data, making the survey comparable between states.

For some large companies, data were collected via personal visit, but the bulk of the survey effort was conducted by mail. Mail and telephone follow-up contacts were made to non-responding companies. Technical procedures are available on the Bureau of Labor Statistics Internet site at <http://stats.bls.gov/oes/>.

The collection document included supplemental definitions of job titles and job duties. Employers were encouraged to match not just the job title but also the duties of their workers with the job duties listed in the supplemental definitions.

Employers were asked to report the number of employees by occupational classification and by pay range. Only wage and salary-type compensation data are included in the survey results. Fringe benefit costs, overtime, production bonuses, incentive pay and other non-wage earnings are not included.

Timeliness

Accurate and reliable wage surveys take time to conduct. The sample must be designed and selected, data must be collected, coding and editing must be completed, analysis must be conducted and results must be published. The data for the current panels of this survey were collected between November 2011 and May 2012. The U.S. Department of Labor, Bureau of Labor Statistics then processed the files in combination with data from the November 2009 through May 2011 surveys. These files were returned to states, which then processed the files through an estimates software system to reflect May 2012.

In general wages do not change quickly. However, occupations and industries that are growing faster than average are likely to experience rapidly changing wages. For some high-demand occupations, especially in the skilled health care fields, wages have grown at a faster rate than other occupations.

Understanding & Using Wage Information

Wage information is essential to employers, employees and everyone else who participates in the labor market. Employers use the data to determine whether they are paying their workers a competitive wage, to build wage and salary administration structures, to recruit workers, to find locations where new business operations may be successful and to maintain internal equity among current workers in an occupation.

Job seekers, students and other individuals use wage data to make decisions about jobs or careers, to negotiate job offers or promotions, to make relocation decisions and to decide which educational programs to pursue. Researchers use wage data to analyze trends, and managers use it to design and implement policies.

Matching your job with the survey

There is no single right wage rate for an occupation. The economy and the supply and demand of the job market determine the wage an employer is willing and able to pay. The individual employee decides whether to accept the wage offered for the job.

Companies differ considerably in the products or services produced, working conditions, size, location and complexity of work required for different jobs. There are also significant differences between the skills, education, experience and abilities of employees within each occupational classification. Because of these differences, there is typically a wide range of wages actually paid for a single occupation. The right wage for a job is the one that matches the individual employee's compensation with the work to be performed and the industry, not merely the average surveyed wage.

Therefore, whether you are an employer, an employee or a job seeker, the best way to match a job with a wage is to match the skills and responsibilities of the job with the skills and responsibilities defined for the surveyed occupation.

All employers do not use the same set of definitions and titles for jobs so it is important to use the definition of duties rather than just the titles to match and compare wage rates. Job definitions are included in the Glossary of Standard Occupational Classification Job Titles and Definitions. The glossary is also available on the Internet at <http://lmi.idaho.gov/Occupations/WagesbyOccupation.aspx>.

If an occupation is not listed in the survey tables, it may not have been included in the survey because many job titles are employer specific. The occupation also may not appear when the level of employment was too low to derive a reliable wage estimate or when publication of wages rates may have disclosed information about an individual firm.

If the exact title cannot be found, the next step is to benchmark your job with one that is included in the survey. To do this, use wage data for an occupation with a job definition that has similar skills, knowledge and responsibilities or look for the occupation within the next larger geographical area.

Using Middle Range Wage Information

It is possible to make some assumptions about the middle range wage data to assist you in determining whether a wage for an occupation is competitive in the labor market. For example, less experienced workers may be receiving pay closer to the low end and more experienced workers may be receiving pay near the high end. The pay for some occupations is very sensitive to area, size of company, type of company or duties the workers are actually performing. These variables may cause the middle range wages of an occupation to be very broad.

As You Use This Data

Keep the following important points about this wage survey in mind:

- The Idaho Department of Labor has provided an appendix to the official Occupational Employment Statistics data series, which have been developed in cooperation with the Bureau of Labor Statistics. This additional product has not been validated by the Bureau of Labor Statistics and therefore is not an official Bureau of Labor Statistics data series. The Idaho Department of Labor feels however, that it provides additional information that is useful to the users of department data. Differences in the way employers perceive the job definition or job title sometimes lead to differences in the information reported to the survey.
- Wages may vary by area within Idaho. Even in the same geographic area, wide ranges of pay rates for the same occupation are not uncommon. These differences stem, in part, from the degree of competition for workers.
- The higher the level of skill, education or training an occupation requires, the broader the labor market area for recruitment. For example, the labor market for engineers may not be confined to the boundaries of Idaho, but may be regional, national or even international depending on the special skills required. On the other hand, the labor market for low-skill occupations is typically localized because workers may not wish to commute long distances or relocate for low-wage jobs.
- Wage information in this publication is based upon actual wages paid. It measures only the amount paid to the workers of those companies included in the survey at the time it was conducted. This information is not absolute. It is the calculation of wages generated by a statistically valid survey.
- When comparing, evaluating and using wages, it is important to consider both the average and median wage. When these two measures are similar, it can be assumed that the distribution is close to normal. Thus it is a valid indicator of the actual wage being paid in that occupation.
- Estimates for detailed occupations do not sum to the totals because the totals include occupations not shown separately and rounded data are used. Estimates do not include self-employed workers.
- The 2013 Occupational Employment and Wage Report marks the first set of estimates based solely on data collected using the 2010 Standard Occupational Classification (SOC) system. Nearly all the occupations in this release are 2010 SOC occupations. However, some are not. In these cases, an estimate for a temporary occupation was created from data reported for one or more occupations in the 2000 SOC combined with data reported for one or more 2010 SOC occupations. Some occupations have the same title as a 2010 SOC occupation but not the same content. These occupations are marked with a pound sign (#) and given a temporary code. For a list of all occupations including 2010 SOC occupations and how data collected on two structures were combined, see the Bureau of Labor Statistics' Frequently Asked Questions online at www.bls.gov/oes/oes_ques.htm#Ques41.
